- Lossy compression is a type of compression where some of the original data from the image file is lost.
- Once you go to lossy, the procedure is irreversible; there is no turning back. And the degradation gets worse the more you compress it.
- There are two lossy image formats: JPEG and GIF.